

Ladies Singles Final

Well this game didn't disappoint spectators – or so I'm told, as I was one of the two on the field battling it out, which is why this is particularly hard to write.

Comments, which I overheard, from the spectators on the side included “This is nerve-wracking”, and believe me, it was no less so for Tania and I. At one point – after being neck and neck from 11 all - a couple of ends before the deciding end, we were about 23 all at the time, Tania said to me – “I'm nervous”. We both had a chuckle and laughed at that, but I didn't want to let on to her that I'd been nervous since about 12.30, before the game started. Tania's one hell of a competitor and a good solid player, she played a terrific draw game (another comment from a spectator). I can't speak for Tania, but I had fun playing against her, she's a very tough opponent, and the level to which we both played made the game “a good one”.

Final score 25:23 to yours truly – Pam Salway

John arrowing in on title

John Arrowsmith warmed up for his tilt at a second successive Toowong singles title with two sectional wins, 21-16 and 21-9, at the Australian Open on Sunday.

John just missed out on winning his section at Mermaid Beach after losing the first of three sectional games 21-16 but at the time of writing was a chance of advancing as a wildcard.

The same applied to Piotr Malicki who also won two of his three matches, 21-16 and 21-19, losing the other 21-17.

But on a brighter note for Toowong, Peter Longland won his section with three wins - 21-3, 21-15, and 21-13, and continues his campaign next Monday.

Alicja Malicka and Pam Salway play in the Ladies Pairs on Wednesday at Helensvale with a tough first match pitched against players who represented Australia in the Commonwealth Games. Good luck girls.

Meanwhile, the Toowong singles finalists will be decided on Saturday when titleholder John Arrowsmith meets Val Scolaro in a semi-final. Giant killer Scott Gregory is already through to the final.

John is on track to pull off the singles-pairs double for the second year in a row. He is through to the pairs final after he and Piotr Malicki beat Val Scolaro and Bill Mills 25-16 in tough conditions at night.

They will meet the winner of the semi-final between Doug Pannell/Chris Hassen and Jim Pope/Peter Jordan.

Congrats to Peter Jordan, Frank Lever and Des Hancock on winning W of L in the Western Triples at St Lucia.

Burleigh Heads Fours: The Toowong team of Robbie Rimes, Doug Pannell, David Falkenmire and Jim Adams acquitted themselves well with five wins and three losses by one, four and eight. Four of the wins were in succession.

Unfortunately the 8-shot loss came in the second game of the finals when there was some serious prizemoney up for grabs.

A HUGE CONGRATS from the men to Pam and Tania on their epic women's singles final, and especially to winner Pam whose rapid progress in the game has been outstanding.
